As a result of your letter of 6 December 1959, we have considered the map project in considerable detail and have investigated the various possibilities of supplying your office with the necessary source materials. With the exception of the two major cities, we find that it would not be practical to supply evaluated source materials other than in a completed manuscript form. This would entail hundreds of man-hours on our part which we do not have available for this program. With respect to the two major cities, it does not appear to be necessary to republish the city plans as they have been in use for several years. To limit the job to the two major city plans would negate the basic reason for our initial inquiry to you.

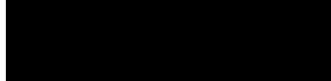

We appreciate very much your cooperative attitude toward our proposal and will continue to look to you and [redacted] for potential joint efforts in the future.

Very truly yours,
